

Eva Hertle, Daniel Nordhoff, Peter F.E. Sloane und Caren Sureth (2007):

CHE-Rating: Beschäftigungsfähigkeit (Employability) deutscher Bachelor-Absolventen: Das Fatale daran ist das Fatale darin!

in:

Zeitschrift für Berufs- und Wirtschaftspädagogik 103(4), 597-611.

Abstract:

In Germany ratings of Universities have become common. One of the famous programs has been developed by the CHE (Centrum für Hochschulentwicklung). The published results of this rating have a high influence on the public reception of higher education in Germany. – An analysis of the CHE-Rating on employability shows quite a lot of conceptual failings. The CHE-results are not really sustainable and the work of the CHE-group is more or less a fly-by-night-program. Therefore a few hints are given how a meaningful rating-approach to measure employability should be developed.